Dear Mr. Lauder:

Thank you so much for replying to my request of Mr. Casey for a Polar Regions Atlas. It will be enormously valuable to us, and I am most grateful.

Extend my best wishes to him and members of the agency. He was an early inspiration to me in the days when I was with the State University of New York, and later Ambassador to the U.N.'s Economic and Social Council.

Cordially,

Glenn A. Olds
President

Dear Mr. Olds:

Thank you for your recent letter to Mr. Casey requesting a copy of the brochure, Polar Regions Atlas.

Mr. Casey is out of town and I am responding for him. Please accept the brochure with our compliments. We hope it proves helpful and wish you success with your upcoming international conference.

Sincerely,

George V. Lauder
Director, Public Affairs

Mr. William Casey, Director
Central Intelligence Agency
CIA Building
Washington, DC 20505

Dear Bill:

I keep thinking one of your trips to the Far East you'll stop over in your refueling long enough to give us a chance to shake hands and show you something of the "last of the big time splendors".

I've chatted with [redacted] recently for professional counsel as some of the people here have been trying to urge me to run for governor. The reason for this note is a pedantic matter that I hate to burden a man of your responsibility with something so trivial and perhaps your secretary can handle it in a very expeditious way. We have been talking about projecting a major international conference at Barrow with a trip up to the North Pole and I've been trying to get a Polar Regions Atlas. The U.S. Government Printing Office brought out a publication entitled, Polar Regions Atlas No. 041-015-00094-2 which I understand was brought out by the Central Intelligence Agency in 1978 and reprinted in 1980. Alas, they are out of print and the presumption was that there might be an extra copy lying around in one of your offices. Since we're on kind of a tight time line in projecting this conference and because of the importance of some of the map material in that atlas I'm wondering if any of your people could find a copy and send it. I'd be pleased to pay whatever is required.

Cordially,

Glenn A. Olds
